152 Children In Summer School

ful evaluation of the progress made by each individual, an evaluation form was devised which lists skills under each objective. Examples of these skills are: Sees likenesses and differences a pre-reading skill; or, uses a number vocabulary; largest, smallest, tallest, etc. - a quantitative concept evaluation.

The present summer staff is composed of seven teachers and eight teacher-aides. The class size varies from 21 to 23 students per teacher. This is a better pupil - teacher ratio than is possible in a regular session, which is a significant factor in considering the progress made by the students. The teacher-aides,also, are essential to the effectiveness of the program. These para-professionals are used in both the summer and winter sessions as a part of the instructional team rather than as clerical assistants to the teachers. The background of the teacher-aides employed in the summer program varies from that of high school graduate to college graduate.

Appomattox Primary School is recognized by Title I personnel and State Department of Education personnel as one in which a continuous progress program is being administered. During the past session, sixteen school divisions from throughout the state sent representatives to observe teaching techniques and the use of a wide variety of teaching materials within the instructional program. The concept of individualized instruction is fundamental in planning an effective school program which enables all children to share in certain basic experiences and each child to participate in activities based upon interests, abilities, and special skills or talents. Each individual is provided opportunity to achieve his potential. Local citizens are invited to visit in the classrooms during both the summer and regular sessions to observe the teaching procedures employed.

Supervisors Support Project

in the case of the county, the possibility of other sites for sanitary landfills in order that all residents of the county will have easy access to areas where bottles, cans, garbage, etc. can be disposed of in a sanitary way.

The supervisors also voted to give the Appomattox County Rescue Squad $500 this fiscal year and $500 each year on a continuing basis to assist with operating expenses or other needs of the Squad.

The motion was made by Southside supervisor John C. Cole, following a discussion of the matter in which it was brought out the support of the Appomattox Squad has heretofore come exclusively from county people or others contacted personally.

The supervisors said that it is not their wish that citizens be asked to "give twice" to various causes, and that many times other organizations have approached them asking for funds only to be turned down because a fund drive was reaching most of the people of the area, anyway, through door-to-door canvasses or other means. They feel, however, that the work of the Rescue Squad includes the availability of help and service to everyone in the county who needs it. They said, further, that it was their understanding that because of the fund drive last year for $14,500 for the new Squad vehicle, donations to the Squad had dropped sharply, probably because people are not aware that the entire drive ($14,500) is being used for the new vehicle and not for day-to-day expenses.

Pastor Speaks

Who's Got The Power?

The nation of Communist China is being raised these days upon Chairman Mao's "Little Red Book." Its thoughts and its words accompany most of the inhabitants of that most populous nation in their daily chores, their daily jobs, and in outings of all kinds. Some Chinese attribute to Chairman Mao's words the power to start a stubborn engine or the power to stop a run away horse. Some claim you can heal diseases or bring people back to life by use of the words. Brides and grooms repeat sayings from the Little Red Book to one another as a part of their ceremony. Surgeons and table tennis players attribute their prowess to the power inherent in the words of Mao.

The personality cult built up around Mao has led the people to revere him in the same way that he has in himself is to be revered. Pictures of Mao are carried through the streets of China and homage towards and upon worship is given to him.

Chairman Mao's words are entered great power upon the people of China. The thoughts, the ideas, and the teachings are influencing Chinese life in every corner.

But the words of Chairman Mao are not such an answer to the needs of the world's millions. They don't relieve sin, guilt, loneliness, despair and temptation. They don't remove sorrow, death, grief, poverty, and sickness. They don't bring patience, happiness, joy, peace and satisfaction. The only words which do that are the words of Jesus Christ, for Christ said, "All power is given unto me in heaven and earth." (Matthew 28: 18).

The words of Jesus Christ are to be heard and obeyed. The promises uttered by Jesus Christ are to be applied and lived out. Jesus Christ said, "I am the bread of life. He that cometh to me shall never hunger, and he that believeth on me shall never thirst." (John 6:35) Jesus claims to have within his sayings, his words, the power to transform our lives.

We need to take literally these words and promises of Jesus Christ and need to claim all the power of heaven and earth which is given unto him. The words of Norman Mac may be appealing and enticing, but they can't hold a candle to the words and teachings of Jesus Christ. Christ has the power. Christ's people need to claim that power from his words.

FOLLOWING 'ORDERS'

Lesson for July 18, 1971

Background Scripture: Deuteronomy 16:18-20; 17:8-11; Daniel 6; Acts 4:13-20; 1 Peter 2:13-17.
Devotional Reading: 1 Peter 4: 12-19.

At the Nuremburg War Trials following the Second World War some of the defendants sought to justify their "war crimes" by protesting that they had "only been following orders." They had been obedient to the laws of the Third Reich; surely they should not be condemned for obeying the law? The Allies, however, said they should have been obedient to a higher law than that of the states.

"Only Following Orders"

Several months ago an American soldier was on trial for a similar "war crime." He too protested that he had "only been following orders," Ironically, the same American public which called for the prosecution of Germans at Nuremburg now found itself confused and upset by the very same issue. Instead of insisting that he too should have been obedient to a higher authority, many exalted his unquestioning obedience of the military authority.

We have had to realize that this problem of God and state is not so easy as we might have thought. On the one hand we are counseled by Paul: "Let every person be subject to the governing authorities . . . Therefore he who resists the authorities resists what God has appointed . . ." (Romans 13:1,2). There is also Peter: "Be subject for the Lord's sake to every human institution . . . (1 Peter 2:13).

These early Christian leaders recognized the value of government law and order, even when the rulers were not inclined to the Gospel of Jesus Christ. For all its faults, this right order and peace where it prevailed. Because man is a sinner and not perfectly good, and because in his rebelliousness against God he is capable of causing much harm and misery to others, he needs some source of authority to help him live a productive life. We wish men would always want to be right thing, but they do not and so we need government and governors to help us along the right line.

Right In The Sight Of God

Yet, having said this, we cannot forget that Jesus was unfairly tried and put to death as a subversive of the state. There is Peter and John standing before the Jewish court and protesting that they would have to obey God rather than men and there is also a long history of struggle between Christians and their states: John Hus, Martin Luther, Thomas More, Jonathan Edwards, etc.

How can we put these two seemingly paradoxical ideas together? Perhaps we must say, for one thing, that we must be subject to the state and its officials so long as our loyalty to God is not in danger. Order, even the imperfect order of a struggling government, is preferable to that must not be tolerated. Secondly, however, we must remember that our loyalty to God in the end is to be expressed not in words but to careless and unthinking obedience to the highest "orders" of God. At 49¢ A Pound . . . .

Abdullah Franklin holds an 18 inch ruler to check to be sure - but this tomato is six inches in diameter and weighs one pound 14 ounces. He says that at 49¢ a pound (current retail price at stores) his home-grown Ponderosas are well worth the effort he puts into his garden. Oh yes . . . this is only one of several giants already on the vine,as of July 12, waiting for the thin-sliced bread,crisp bacon, mayonnaise, or whatever you like in a tomato sandwich.

In the photo behind Mr. Franklin is an "elephant ear" plant, gift of Mrs. Nelson R. Jordan, and it's rather a giant grower in its own right, also. Or to use Father Darkleaf's words in a different way, "Appomattox is a Growing place."
